NOW!!! PUSHBUTTON MEASUREMENT AND RECORDING

First in the field, Houston Fearless' Recording Spectroradiometer measures and records total and spectral radiance of light sources and other optical radiation sources. Its region is near infrared to near ultraviolet — 200-1000 m. And it measures in absolute energy units: a readout of watts per sq. centimeter per steradian per millimicron for spectral measurements, and watts per square centimeter per steradian for total radiance.

Dual units — optical head and recording console. Strip chart records total radiance as a function of time, or total radiance as a function of time or wavelength. Regular indication at 100m intervals. Numeric visual indication of scan at all times and scan can be stopped for continuous recording at any wavelength. Calibration by Houston Fearless, no adjustments. Simple radiation and optical alignments. Pushbutton control. Range selector. Many other features described in new 4-page brochure.
